OVERVIEW

When Florida employers seek resolution of claims or controversies arising out of the Florida workers' compensation law, they often turn to Heather. Board Certified by The Florida Bar in Workers' Compensation, Heather leads Marshall Dennehey's Florida workers' compensation practice. She devotes the entirety of her practice to workers' compensation defense, representing businesses, third-party administrators and self-insureds across myriad industries. Heather's clients benefit from her insights and experience in dealing with the analysis and litigation of problems or controversies arising out of the Florida Workers' Compensation Law. She also has experience handling employment law matters.

Heather is an active writer and lecturer. She has authored multiple articles in the Florida Workers' Comp Reporter. She has lectured on behalf of the Workers' Compensation Section of The Florida Bar and at various continuing education seminars. Heather is also a Certified Instructor of Insurance Education for the State of Florida and often presents seminars to clients.

Prior to joining Marshall Dennehey, Heather was a partner at one of the leading defense firms in the southeast.

Away from work, she enjoys hiking, biking, traveling and spending time with her family. She is a committee member with the Jacksonville Humane Society, and volunteers for Jacksonville Area Legal Aid (JALA). She completed the 2008 New York City marathon, and the National Breast Cancer Marathon, and often participates in road races that benefit various charitable organizations.

RESULTS

Settlement Agreements Upheld in Florida Workers' Compensation Cases

Workers' Compensation

January 31, 2024

We successfully argued that a settlement agreement, based upon a binding and enforceable agreement reached via email between the parties, is enforced. The claimant had given her attorney authority to settle, but subsequently changed her mind. Based upon case law, there was unequivocal authority to settle and it was too late for the claimant to negate the agreement previously reached. The judge of compensation claims agreed and upheld the settlement.

Judge doesn't buy that chemical exposure was major contributing cause for claimant's complaints.

Workers' Compensation

February 16, 2022

We won a total controvert on a workers' compensation exposure claim and successfully defended a denial. The claimant alleged exposure to a toxic airplane paint thinner at a plant in Kentucky in December of 2019. He was a subcontractor of the airplane manufacturer, but a Florida employee. The claimant complained of breathing issues and skin rashes. He sought treatment at an emergency room in Kentucky on the date of alleged exposure ,and again approximately 10 months later for skin rashes. However, the claimant was able to continue working without any wage loss the entire time.

Successful defense of motion for summary judgment filed by another carrier in a disputed employer/employee issue.

Workers' Compensation

March 1, 2020

The issue involved whether the injured employee was the statutory employee of our client, or of the subcontractor who actually hired him. The injured worker was hired by a subcontractor during the aftermath of the Category 5 storm, Hurricane Michael, that hit near Panama City, Florida on October 10, 2018.
